A. P. PRAISES
THE WORK OF
FRANK KINGService Bulletin Tells of His Perilous Journey Across Russia.

IS CITED FOR HEROISM

Columbian Recently Deported to Finland by Soviet Authorities.

The service bulletin of the Associated Press reviews the work of Frank H. King of Columbia, who recently made a trip through Russia as correspondent for the organization. King was graduated from the School of Journalism in 1917, and since that time has been working in the Orient for the Japan Advertiser and the Associated Press. The Associated Press tells about some of his accomplishments as follows:

The curtain which for more than two years had hidden actual conditions in interior Russia from public knowledge was lifted somewhat on August 10, when Frank H. King, correspondent for the Associated Press, called from Viborg, Finland an account of his remarkable 4,000 mile journey from Vladivostok through Siberia and Asiatic and European Russia. He visited Petrograd and Moscow and was deported from the latter city when it was discovered that he had not been given advance authorization by the Soviet military regime to cross Siberia.

Mr. King, perhaps the first American civilian to enter the soviet boundaries from the East since the collapse of the Kolchak regime, upon reaching Irkutsk in Central Siberia on June 19, forwarded an interesting picture of conditions: "All institutions have been nationalized," he called, "most of the stores have been closed and a permit is necessary to even purchase a newspaper." He continued:

"This city was the scene of the tragic end of Admiral Kolchak's efforts to establish supreme rulership in Siberia. He was executed and buried here, but only one soviet official and two laborers can point out the spot where his body lies."

Crossed the 700-Mile Desert.
"Irkutsk is today a city of soldiers. The Associated Press correspondent, in reaching Irkutsk, made a 2,000 mile detour, which took six weeks, from Vladivostok through China and Mongolia and across the 700-mile Gobi desert. Crossing the Mongolian frontier, he entered the new buffer state of the Far Eastern Republic, and found it necessary to wait at this republic's capital, Verkhne-Ussuriysk, for Bolshevik permission to enter Soviet territory. He received an answer from Irkutsk that an American press representative would be welcome, and the buffer state authorities were instructed to provide him with a safe conduct through a series of military controls.

"There is direct rail and wire communication from here to Moscow, and it is claimed trains make the trip in fourteen days. All persons must travel third class, that is, in freight cars. High government officials, however, are exempt from this rule."

Arriving at Terijoki, Finland, which is the first town outside the Russian frontier, early in August, Mr. King sent a series of graphic dispatches further describing internal affairs in Russia as well as the political, military, social and economic aspects of Moscow. He left Vladivostok early in May and his journey consumed about ten weeks. The Viborg dispatch said that although Soviet Russia was then "flushed with success and confident of Poland's defeat," the entire country "faces the approach of winter with the grim problem of food as its supreme test of power." Meat, salt, and other articles of food, Mr. King said, were scarce even at 1,500 rubles or the approximate equivalent of $1 in American money per pound.

SAVED LIVES AT VLADIVOSTOK
Mr. King distinguished himself at Vladivostok in the critical days of the Bolshevik occupation. He saved the lives of a number of women and children during a machine gun bombardment when the Kolchak and Bolshevik forces fought for possession of the city. A letter from the American commandant in Vladivostok, a facsimile of which was published in the Service Bulletin, praised the A. P. correspondent's heroism, and said he deserved to be "cited for a decoration." It was through Mr. King's exclusive dispatches that the outside world was kept constantly informed of the rapidly changing developments in Vladivostok and the surrounding territory. When the American Expeditionary Forces withdrew from Siberia Mr. King turned his attention toward penetrating Russia and reaching Moscow. He traveled with an American army officer as companion. It was a perilous trip. He had no special facilities, rode over a disorganized railroad system and frequently had to resort to freight cars to help him on his way. Previously Mr. King had gone to Peking to consult with Walter C. Whiffen, the A. P. correspondent in the Chinese capital, after which he went through Manchuria to Lake Baikal. When the two men got to Irkutsk on June 6, the Soviet authorities allowed them to proceed. It afterward developed that a message had been received from the Lenin-Trotsky government forbidding the Americans to enter European Russia.

The State Department in Washington also received word from its consular representatives in Finland telling of Mr. King's arrival.

NEW YORKER GETS HOMESICK

Prospective Student Faces About Before Reaching Columbia.

Have you ever been homesick? We all have; but it usually comes to us before we are old enough to attend the university. This was not the case, however, with a boy from New York.

A young man boarded a train the other day at St. Louis with a ticket from New York to Columbia. He sat down beside a student in the University. There was a discussion of the University and Columbia, then the New Yorker told the student that he was getting homesick, and he thought he would go back home. The student laughed and tried to make him forget his homesickness, but his attempts proved unsuccessful.

The New Yorker told the conductor the same story. When asked if he had ever been away from home before, he broke down crying and said that he had been to Long Island once. The New Yorker was about twenty-five years old. He got off at Mexico and was headed for New York when last seen.

TEACHERS TRY FOR INCREASE
OF MEMBERSState Association Wants 100
Per Cent Enrollment
This Year.

PLAN FIVE REFORMS

Urges Uniform Taxes, Physical Training and Minimum Wage Scale.

"Every teacher in Missouri a member of the M. S. T. A. Every county completely organized. Every teacher a member of a local organization." These are the slogans for 1920-21 of the Missouri State Teachers' Association and they are being enthusiastically spread throughout the state.

"One hundred per cent enrollment of the 20,000 teachers in Missouri is the aim of the organization," said Thomas J. Walker, assistant secretary of the association.

Active campaigns throughout the state are now urging this. The legislative program also will urge it before the General Assembly which convenes at Jefferson City in January, 1921.

The program has five main objectives. Among the most important is the county unit bill which provides, by uniform taxation the equalization of educational opportunity. A second provision will make for physical training and health inspection of the school children. A third objective is a minimum wage law for the purpose of attracting a high class of men and women to the profession of teaching. A new state constitution is also favored, especially for the regulation of taxes. The fifth important point is the bill providing for the removing from politics of the state board of education.

The association is optimistic over the outcome of the program, as candidates for state offices are endorsing it.

John M. Atkinson, Democratic candidate for governor, has specifically endorsed it, as has Arthur M. Hyde, the Republican candidate. Both the Democratic and Republican candidates for Lieutenant governor are in favor of it, but only the Democratic candidate for secretary of state has approved it. Reasonable success has been achieved from candidates for the Legislature.

In the rural districts this constructive program will have the support of many farmer organizations. At least a major part of it will be passed, advocates of the program believe.
